Dear Mr. Makinde,

Letter of Appreciation : Donation of Copies of Echoes of Mercy

I am writing to express my profound gratitude for your generous and strategic donation of two copies of my autobiography, Echoes of Mercy, to each of the tertiary institutions across Ogun State, Nigeria.

What you have done goes far beyond the act of giving books. I consider it as a deliberate investment in knowledge, values, and the future of young minds. Through this gesture, you have metamorphosed from being a respected colleague and cherished friend into a vision enabler and capacity builder of exceptional repute. Your action gives life and momentum to the very heart of Echoes of Mercy—a story meant to inspire hope, faith, resilience, and purpose in the hearts of many.

It is deeply humbling to know that the content of the book resonated with you in such a way that you not only encouraged me as the author but also chose to champion its message by placing it within the reach of countless students and educators. This singular act of thoughtfulness and foresight has undoubtedly expanded the reach and impact of the vision behind the book.

As I continue to write and work on new books, I sincerely hope you will join me for those journeys as well.

If you or someone you love would want to document their autobiography, I would be honoured to help document and preserve it. Everyone's life is a unique tapestry of experiences, and I believe those stories deserve to be shared and remembered.

Thank you for believing in the power of shared stories. Thank you for being a torchbearer in the quest to develop minds, shape character, and inspire generations. May your seed of generosity yield a bountiful harvest of favor, open doors, and enduring legacy. May the Lord continue to reward your kindness, enlarge your influence, and cause His mercy to echo continually in your life.

With sincere appreciation,

Kayode Ogunjobi FFAN
